Freelance Service

English–Arabic Translation

Skills-to-Service Summary

I am fluent in both English and Arabic, with strong reading comprehension and writing ability in each. I pay close attention to tone, grammar, and cultural context; skills that are essential for accurate, natural-sounding translation rather than literal, robotic conversion. This makes translation a service I can realistically deliver from day one.

Niche & Target Client

My target clients are small e-commerce sellers and startup founders in the Arab world who want to sell to English-speaking markets (or vice versa) but don't have the budget for a full localization agency.

Their core problem: product descriptions, websites, and marketing copy that are either untranslated, machine-translated, or poorly worded — which makes their brand look unprofessional and costs them sales and trust with international customers.

Service Offering Statement

I provide an accurate, natural-sounding English–Arabic translation for product listings, websites, and marketing content, helping small business owners reach new customers without losing their brand's tone or credibility. Clients get a copy that reads as if it were written natively in the target language, not machine-translated. My first freelance goal is to complete three translation projects for my portfolio and land one paying client within 30 days.

First 30-Day Goal

Build a translation portfolio featuring 2–3 sample pieces, such as product descriptions, short biographies, or social media content. Next, establish a profile on Khamsat and submit applications to a minimum of 10 targeted job postings to secure my first paid project.
